Let's Start!

Let's review!

Learning Outcome

Exchange information about people's interests and backgrounds using a wider range of language.

Ask your partner:

- Do you have a friend who has had bad luck with dating?
- If you could give 3 pieces of advice about dating to a friend, what would they be?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about what I do, did or have done.
- I can express possibility, certainty, suggestions and expectations.
- I can encourage agreement and show I understand someone's feelings or situation.

Let's Explore!

Sadly, in love, as in everything else, when you snooze, you lose!

* "You snooze, you lose" means that if you wait too long for something, you won't end up getting it.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Sally: Peter! You look miserable! What happened?
Peter: I finally gave Camilla a call.
Sally: Wow! That was a gutsy move.
Peter: She told me she already had a boyfriend. She's been with him for a couple of months already. She even said that he might be her soulmate.
Sally: Aw, I'm sorry, Peter. That must've felt like a shock.
Peter: I wish I wasn't so slow on the uptake! I should've realized she had a crush on me back in college!
Sally: You just take a while to understand what's going on sometimes, that's all.
Peter: Things don't always seem obvious to me, you know that! I wish it wasn't always the case.
Sally: I think you've always been more interested in your comics than real-life situations, perhaps. Don't you wish you were more grounded in reality?
Peter: Sally, I'm a nerd. I've tried sounding like a more sensible kind of guy, but it has always failed to impress anyone. No matter how hard I try, I can never sound spontaneous when I'm out of my element. Don't you think I wish things were different for me?
Sally: In that case, I know what you're supposed to do. The girl of your dreams must be in a comic book store. You should keep your eyes open this time!

Let's Practice!

Learning Points

Managing a Conversation

It is common to show you understand someone's feelings in a conversation.

You use negative questions to confirm information you already know.

You use "I wish ..." to talk about things you do not have or do, or you cannot have or do.

Negative questions can have two different meanings.

You can ask a negative question for confirmation of a positive belief.

You can ask a negative question for confirmation of a negative belief.

Example:

Don't you think I wish things were different for me?

The verb wish introduces an idea. After wish, you use a verb in the past tense.

I wish I knew ...

I wish I had ...

I wish you were ...

Structure:

Wish + Simple Past tense

Example:

I wish it wasn't always the case.

I wish I had asked her out in college.

Learning Points

Modals For Possibility, Certainty, Suggestions and Expectations

You use modals when you want to express possibility, certainty, suggestions and expectations.

You use may, might and could to express possibility in the past and in the future.

*Might suggests that something is less possible than may

- might / might not + infinitive
- could / could not + infinitive
- may / may not + infinitive

Example:

She even said that he might be her soulmate.

Expressing Certainty

You use must to express that something is necessarily true.

Example:

The girl of your dreams must be in a comic book store!

Should, could, might and would are used to express suggestions:

Example:

You should keep your eyes open this time.

You can also use supposed to to express expectation.

Example:

I know what you're supposed to do.
