Let's Start!

Pronunciation Spot: Love can be an adventure sometimes!

Learning Outcome

Describe complicated or unusual events in the past through a wider range of B1 language in both work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Where in the world would you go for an incredible adventure? Why?
- Would you follow someone all around the world for love? Why or why not?

Can Do Statements

- I can say and use the sound -ture.
- I can say and use questions like "What do you ...?"
- I can talk about things I have done or have been doing.

Let's Explore!

Paula's mother's story is stranger than fiction!

* When something is "stranger than fiction" it almost seems too hard to believe it's true.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Peter: Tell me more about your mother's adventure in Italy. You have been doing a great job telling the story.

Paula: My mother didn't know that much about Italian culture, but she knew a lot about human nature. My father lived in a tight-knit community. She knew people would react negatively if she arrived uninvited at his home. She also knew my father was a creature of habit. He would always stop for an espresso at the same coffee shop on his way home from work.

Peter: So she went to the coffee shop!

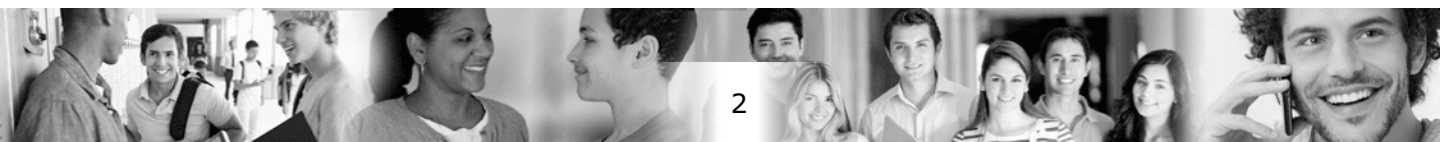

Paula: No.

Peter: What do you mean?

Paula: I've thought a lot about what happened next. My mother knew a fortune teller lived in town. She went to see her and explained the situation. She told her about some of the romantic experiences they had shared, like admiring ancient sculptures. She explained how sad she felt. Then, she gave the fortune teller directions to the coffee shop. What do you think happened next?

Peter: The fortune teller talked to your father.

Paula: Exactly. The next day, at the precise hour, the fortune teller introduced herself to my father. She told him she felt a strong message warning him to think carefully about what he wants in life. My father has never forgotten that day.

Let's Practice!

Time to pronounce the -ture sound.

Learning Points

Reduction of Auxiliary Verbs and You in Questions

When you speak, it is common to use the reduced form of modals and auxiliaries in sentences and questions.

Reduction is very common in conversations. It doesn't happen when you write. When you use a reduced form of auxiliary verbs in a questions, you link the words together when you say them.

Example:

What do you mean? = Whatchu mean?

What do you think happened next? = Whatchu think happened next?

Learning Points

Pronouncing Present Perfect Continuous vs. Present Perfect

When you use the Present Perfect or the Present Perfect Continuous, you stress the action that you are talking about.

You use the Present Perfect tense mainly to express that an action is completed or to emphasize the result.

Form:

form of have + base form of verb + -ed

You emphasize the base form of verb + -ed when you speak.

Example: I've watched many movies set in Italy.

You use the Present Perfect Continuous tense to emphasize the duration or continuous course of an action.

Form:

Form of have + been + base form of verb + -ing

You emphasize the base form of verb + -ing when you speak.

Example: I've been planning the party for two months.

Read and compare the following sentences:

Present Perfect	Present Perfect Continuous
You've done a great job. I've thought a lot about what happened. I've told the story many times. I've talked to your father.	You've been doing a great job. I've been thinking about what happened lately. I've been telling this story lately. I've been talking to your father.
